ANIMAL AMBASSADORS

Say hello to the new PVPR Animal Ambassador - King Banana!

You may have already met him, but help us welcome King Banana the Axolotl to his new home at PVPR! Formerly at the PV Public Library, KB made the big move across the breezeway to live next to his best friend, Clementine.

As an Animal Ambassador to PVPR, King Banana will help educate the public about the importance of wildlife and how you can help protect them. Like Clementine, his job is to simply eat, sleep, and live a happy life here in Prescott Valley. Be sure to help him celebrate his birthday alongside Clementine at their group birthday party in June!

To learn more about King Banana, our other Animal Ambassadors, and how you can become a wildlife steward, visit one of our Animal Ambassador programs or stop by during business hours!

THANK YOU TO PV PUBLIC LIBRARY FOR OUR NEW FRIEND!

FUN FACT:

Yelllowstone, established in 1872, was the first ever national park. This predates the existence of the National Park Service, created in 1916. Before this, the departments of War, Agriculture, and the Interior would take turns supervising the nation's parks, monuments, and reserves.
